A Young Man Attempts to Horsewhip A TOUSE MAN ATTEMPTS TO HORSEWIIF
HIS STEP-FATHERS.—A young man, named Adolphus Phisaney, attempted to horsewhip his step-father, James Fatzen, yesterday afternoon, for abusing his mother; but the old man, who is at least sixty years of age, defended himself with a hoop-pole, and would,
in all probability, have turned the tables, but for the interference of an officer, who took both the parties into custed and confined both the parties into custody and confined them in the Hammond-street Station-house. Fatzen gave ball for his appearance this morn-ing before Judge Lowe, but the step-son was compelled to spend the night in "durance vile."

The Sheriff also sold one promissory note made by Caleb B. Smith, President of the Cincinnati and Chicago Railroad Company, payable to the order of Caleb B. Smith, for the sum of $2,500, dated New York, November 1, 1855, and payable twelve months after date. Sold to J. W. Vinton for $20.

ATTEMPTED SUICIDE—AN HABITUR OF THE CITY PRISON SWALLOWS POISON.—A young woman named Manyaret McClure, whose misfortune, rather than her innate tendency to vice, have often made her an inmate of the City Prison, attempted to destroy herself, yesterday morning, about eight o clock, by taking a heavy dose of laudanum. For a few months past she has been an inmate of the new Female City Prison, but a few days ago was discharged from that institution under the promise of seeking for and obtaining employment.

How hard such a task is, may be readily imagined. Society, as a whole, has little aympathy with the woman who has fallen from what it conceives to be the pinnacle of virtue, no matter what the circumstances or the temptations, and against her the cave of forgiveness is forever closed by a rock no angel can remove.

forgiveness is forever closed by a rock no angel can remove.

The girl had determined to abandon her former habits and associaties, but the resolution was weak, compared to the iron hand which, in the language of Camille Gauthier, "was ever ready to dash her bark and bind her to the shore of infamy." The soul whose only companion is despair, has no incentive to good, and it falls directly into the abyssmal death of carelesses. depth of carclessness. A reaction takes place, and wherein it was bad before, it now becomes worse. Thus, this unfortunate girl again fell, and, night before last, was committed to the station-house, in a state of unconscious intoxication.

When taken before the Police Court yesterday morning she told one of the officers that if sentenced to the City Prison she would destroy herself, and it is not yet quite certain that she has not succeeded in executing her threat. When the officer entered her cell to convey her to prison, she was in a deep sleep, from which he could not arouse her. Dr. Webb was immediately called, and discovered from the symptoms that she was suffering from the effects of an overdose of laudanum. By the application of the proper remedies she was awakened from the torpor into which she had fallen, and, yesterday evening, although still in a critical condition, was in a fair way for ultimate recovery.

We recommend this woman to the Managers of the Home of the Friendless. Under their care, and from their womanly sympathies deriving the strength she so much needs, When taken before the Police Court vestertheir care, and from their womanly sympa-thies deriving the strength she so much needs, we feel assured she might yet be reclaimed, and brought back to the path from which she has strayed. The fact that angels are invisi-ble is no evidence that they are scarce, and we know of at least two score, any of whom might save this woman from the degradation into which she has fallen if the right means were employed.

JOURNALISTIC JEWELS.—Our evening co-temporary, The Cincinnati Times, is gen-erally regarded by our citizens as a jest, and its most serious efforts are often quite as humorous as Vamity Fair or Punch. We herewith reproduce a few gems from its last issue, hoping, however, that our journalistic brethren at a distance will not take them as the best samples of the kind to be found daily in its columns, or regard it as the standard by which to judge of newspaper excellence. The sublime hight it has attained may never be reached again. As a model of a clear, con-cise, and elegantstyle of English composition, we commend our cotemporary to all who have heretofore been students of De Quincey, feel-ing assured they will find in it not only all JOURNALISTIC JEWELS,-Our evening coneretore been students of De Quincey, feeling assured they will find in it not only all his beauties but all his faults.

From a single casket we select for our readers the following jewels, and challenge the newspaper world, the most rural of the rural press not excepted, to produce their equal in brillancy:

"The beauty and intellectual seeming of the young ladies of the College themselves comprise no indifferent feature in the attractive fascination which permeates the Lyceum entertainments. And the audience is ever of a nobler character.

"The Wesleyan Female College is regarded with a solicitude truly admirable to witness, by many a fond and earnest parent; and under the Presidency of Prof. Allyn, it seems still keeping pace with the course of time, in its circling march up the steep ascent to the mountain-pinnacle of Intellect and Godliness—the aim and end of all effort in life."

"The chorusses and selections from the operas of William Tell, Lucia di Lammermoor, Zampa, and Trovolore, under the leadership of Prof. Smith, by the Lyceum Glee Club, assisted by a number of gentlemen amateurs, were rendered with the spirit of truth and understanding. The solo in the passage from Trovolore, (Missrere,) by Miss Priscilla Forgey, of Cincinnati, awakened nods of approbation and recognition from the lovers of operatic music and the frequenters of the opera throughout the room. This high compliment was in every way deserved. We would gladly amplify, and speak more in detail; as for instance, of the passage in the opera of Zampa:
"Darkness now reineth, Sleep all enchaineth; Bliss-

"Who that was present PELT not the soul-hushing sentiment the music seeks to ex-press! the spirit silently listening alone to the myriad-teeming heavens!" It was night. "And so following, we might continue, but cease now, perforce, we must, which we do with the wish—many returns of the Lyceum meetings."

PIRE'S OPERA-HOURE.—The second performance of The Doom of Deville drew quite a large andience to the Opera-house last night, for the benefit of Jooy Gougesheim. As the play is as dull, stupid, and unintervating as any ever performed in this city, we concluded that the attendance was a compliment to the beneficiers, and think she should, regard it as such. From the rise of the curtain upon the first scene until it falls upon the death of "Lionne Delaforet," the drama has not a single redeeming feature; but from the beginning to the end is execrable in the extreme, and, in the fullest sense of the term, an egregious bore.

In the manner in which it is performed, little can be said. There is not a single character which possesses for us the slightest interest, nor a situation that is not farcical. It would not be at all complimentary to say that any artist performed the part well for which he or also had been cast, and yet we will venture the assertion that any interest felt in James Walker and others vs. Thos. Webb and Chas. Stewart, executors of Jno. Walker. The defendants were appointed trustees under the will to carry on the business of Walker's Brewery for a period of seven years. The plaintiffs, the devisees, who are the nephews and nieces of the testator, ask that before the expiration of the term (the 20th of next June), there be a sale of the concern ordered, in order to prevent the loss that would accrue by cason of the stopping of the brewery then, as they can not agree among themselves to carry it on after that time.

The Court considered the application premaure. It might be made after that time, (20th of June). Demurrer of executors as will venture the assertion that any interest felt in the evening's entertainment areas from a direct sympathy with the actors instead of the characters

Another Aurora Borealis Theory.—De la Rive thus defines his theory of auroras: "The vapers constantly rising from the sea, and especially from the equatorial regions, carry with them to the upper regions of the air a great quantity of the positive electricity, to which they serve as the vehick, leaving the surface of the globe negatively electric. Borne to the poles by the currents which always prevail in the higher regions of the atmosphere, these vapors carry with them their electricity, and thus give to the whole atmosphere a positive electric casdition, which diminishes from above downward. This positive electricity tends urcessingly to combine with the negative electricity of the earth, directly through the stratum of air, but more especially at the two poles, where the currents of vapor carried by winds converge and are condensed." According to Mr. De la Rive the aurora of the 29th August was a natural consequence of the great drouth which had prevailed over the continent.

TRUE CHRISTIANITY.—The defens armor of a shrinking or timis policy does not suit her. Her's is the naked majesty of truth; and with all the grasdeu: of age, but with none of its infirmities, has she come down to us, and gathered strength from the many battles she has won in the many controversies of many generations. With such a religion as this there is nothing to hide. All should be above boand; and the broadest light of day should be made fully and freely to circulate throughout all her secresies. But secrets she has none. To her belong the frankness and simplicity of conscious greatness; and whether she grapple it with pride or philosophy, or stand in front opposition to the prejudices of the multitude, she does it upon her own strength, and spurns all the props and all the auxiliaries of superstition away from her.—Dr. Chalmers.

Sang Froid of John Van Buren.—A good story was told us (Hartford Press) the other day, about John Van Buren. He had taken some technical, legal advantage, by which his opponent's client in an action was not suited. The man was furious, and declared his purpose to give John a piece of his mind when he saw him—he would wither him. Happening to see John one day at Downing's, standing at the bar, getting outside of a dozen New York bays, he boldly confronted the Prince, and being a small man, looked up at him fiercely, and burst out—"Mr. Van Buren, is there any client so low and mean, or any case so nasty that you won't undertake to defend him in it?" "I don't know," said John, stopping to put away another oyster, then bending down and confidentially drawing out his reply in the little man's ear, "tehat have you been doing?"

COVINGTON NEWS.

GIPSIES ARRESTED—GREAT EXCITEMENT—
LUSUS NATURE.—For some days past a party of Gipsies have been encamped on the Lexington Pike, about three miles from the city, since which time petty thefts have been frequent during the night, while during the day all the houses in the vicinity have been frequent during the night, while during the day all the houses in the vicinity have been frequent during the night, while during the day all the houses in the vicinity have been frequent during the night, while during the day all the houses in the vicinity have been frequent disguises, such as peddlers, beggars and fortune-tellers. Having extended their field of operations as far as town, a warrant for their arrest was issued, and Officers Francis, Riff and Red. proceeded to the spot and arrested five men and three women, accompanied by six small children. The grown members were arraigned before Justice Shrock on a charge of vagrancy, about twelve o'clock yesterday. The news of the arrest created considerable excitement among both men and boys, all of whom were anxious to obtain a sight of those strange and eccentric people, whose history and mode of life have rendered them so famous. A few minutes was sufficient to fill the Justice's office, to gether with the hall leading thereto, and the street in front.

was sufficient to fill the Justice's office, together with the hall leading thereto, and the street in front.

Concerning the identity of two of the men, named John and James Scarret, and the three women, named Sarah, Betsy and Unity Scarret, together with three of the children, there could be no doubt. They have every mark of the tribe to which they belong, and as they did not deny the charge of vagrancy, they were held over in the sum of $100 each, for their appearance at the next term of the Circuit Court. They deposited the money, gave their own recognizance, and left.

Another of the men, 'a German named Mart. Gratter, stated that he was from Texas, where he had formerly lived, and was on his way to Pennsylvania, to his relations, and that seeing the Gipsy encampment, he supposed they were emigrants, and he accordingly stopped his horse to feed it and take some refreshments, only a few minutes before the officers came up. He had with him a horse, small covered wagon, some bedding, a backet of provisions, and three small children, aged about eight, six and four years.

With reference to this family, we think the world may safely be challenged to find a parallel. Families all blind, idiotic, or deaf mutes, have occasionally been known; but we have no record of an instance in which a deformity so hideous, and so diverse from nature, has been transmitted from a parent to all his children. He was without a thumb on either hand, and had only the third and fourth fingers. His feet parted at the instep and near the ankle, and diverged at least three inches. Each division tapered to a point, on which there was a nail like that of a toe. He wore shoes, however, but his children did not, and the shape of his feet could be judged by theirs. Each chilld had but one finger—the fourth—one each hand but one finger—the fourth—one each hand

Although evidently not a Gipsy, he was in their company, and arraigned with the rest. He was defended by Mr. Allnut, who volunteered his services in his behalf, and when the Court announced his discharge, a spontaneous shout of applause burst from the assembled crowd, whose sympathies were enlisted to the highest degree in behalf of the unfortunate prisoner and his family.

He appeared a harmless, simple creature, weak in body and imbecile in mind, and one resigned to irrevocable melancholy. His hopes in his family had all been blasted, and simple though he was, its evidences were plainly written on his visage. No one who has around him a family of healthy and intelligent children can form any conception of the feelings that embittered the existence of that father as he contemplated his helpless family, which must ere long be thrown upon the charities of the world.

The other two men, uamed Shelby Martin

The other two men, named Shelby Martin and Wm. Krisman, were not Gipsies, and upon asking it a continuance was granted with respect to them until they could establish that they were not vagrants.

Desperate Affray Between a Man and Wife-Both Parties Fatally Eugered.

On Sunday morning last, at New Bedford, Masa, a man named Joseph Williams and his wife, who have not lived together for some time, got into a fight, and inflicted wounds upon each other's heads which will most likely prove fatal. Williams' skull was severely gushed on the top, in twelve places, while the woman was still more dangerously wounded, pieces of her skull being entirely cut out, and on one side broken in. Williams states that at the time the assaults were committed, he called at the place where she was staying and they went to an adjacent shop together to obtain kindlings. He was collecting these for her, stooping down, when she seized the hatchet—a heavy, marderous-looking instrument—and struck him several blows on the back of the head. He fell, and she struck him three times while he was down; after which he became insensible, and upon arousing from this state caught the hatched and struck her three blows, each causing a ghasily wound from which the brains protruded. Despite of their terrible wounds, each of the parties walked hous, a distance of about a squass; but at late accounts no hope was entertained of their recovers.
